Why Navigating Mental Health and Developing Resilience?

Whether it's feeling nervous about a group project, worried about fitting in, or struggling with self-esteem, mental health matters.

STEP
1

Get Your Child/Teen Thinking
by Getting Their Input

- "What's been on your mind lately?"
- "What's something that happened today that made you feel proud, nervous, or frustrated?"
- "If you could describe a time when you felt worried or upset this week, what would it be?"

Trap: Avoid quick solutions like "Oh, don't worry about it." Instead, let them know it's okay to feel what they're feeling and that you're there to support them.

Teach New Skills

- Model by naming your feelings, like "I'm feeling a bit stressed with work, so I'm going to take a few minutes to relax."
- Teach calming techniques, such as counting to ten, listening to music, or visualizing a calm place.
- Help them gain perspective by saying, "If a friend felt this way, what advice would you give them?"

STEP

PRACTICE

Practice to Grow Skills and Develop Habits

- Start a routine where you check in on each other's day, e.g., "What was something challenging today?" or "What was a fun part of your day?"
- Reflect on their emotions and how they changed, like, "You seemed nervous before that math test. How do you feel now that it's over?"
- Recognize when they try new skills, e.g., "I noticed you took a few breaths when you were frustrated about your homework. That's a great way to handle it."

SUPPORT

Support Your Child's/Teen's Development and Success

- Give gentle reminders, like "Remember, you can take a break if things feel overwhelming."
- Check in on tough days by asking, "How are things going? Is anything feeling extra stressful?"
- If they seem stuck, try asking, "What else could we do to make this a bit easier?"

STEP

RECOGNIZE

Recognize Efforts

- Point out specific successes, like, "I'm so impressed that you stayed calm when your friend canceled plans. That was a great example of handling disappointment."
- Create small rewards for practicing mental health strategies, like spending time together doing something they enjoy.
- Give specific praise, saying, "It was really brave of you to talk about your worries instead of holding them inside."

Trap: It can be easy to resort to bribes when recognition and occasional rewards are underutilized. If parents or those in a parenting role frequently resort to bribes, it is likely time to revisit the five-step process.
